

Lenseigne Introduces Competition Holster Rig

New design engineered with Safariland for Bianchi Cowboy

KENDA LENSEIGNE ADDS one more notch to her belt, literally, with a brand new holster design for Bianchi Cowboy. Kenda, part of Team Bianchi, works closely with parent company Safariland engineers and has come up with a holster rig specifically designed for high-end mounted shooting competition, while at the same time capturing high design and classic good looks.

The Cowgirl mounted shooting holster rig is part of the Kenda Signature Line and is designed with a strong side ten degree cant and cross draw twenty degree cant in both right and left hand versions to allow quick draw from either version. Each rig is hand fitted for single action army pistols with 3.5" or 4.75" barrels and features a wide-open top for easy holstering.

The holsters come initially in two different styles: black floral embossed cowhide with a black and white snake insert, or cognac floral embossed cowhide with tan and white snake print insert. Subsequent models will include a Men's version and plain leather inserts instead of snake. The holsters also feature a hidden tension screw and are made from twelve to fourteen ounce leather with steel reinforcements.

The belt system is a two-piece 1.5" drop front with a weight lifter style back support. The drop front is made to position the holsters comfortably and securely while on the course.

Belts are made with the same materials and construction as the holsters, so they match 100% and hold the holsters in place. The black rigs use nickel-plated buckles and the tan uses brass plated buckles.
